Wheel Against an Express Train.

There is something so exhilarating in the very act of bicycling that when two or more wheelmen journey together along a smooth highway even the strongest ties of friendship cannot restrain them from undertaking a spurt now and then to test each other's quality, and it is to this mild but almost involuntary spirit of rivalry, engendered in such informal ways, that we may trace the origin of the hot races that have delighted the public and enthused the craft ever since cycle racing began, nearly 20 years ago.

It was in 1878 that Mr. Will R. Pitman of New York took the honors in the first regulation mile bicycle race ever conducted in America. His time was 3 minutes 57 in America. His time was 3 minutes 57 seconds, and the record was halled as marvelous all over the sporting world. It is said that Mr. Pitman taxed his physical powers to their very utmost in order to accomplish this feat.

Since that time the facilities for making steed have been most distilled.

speed have been wonderfully increased. In the first place, smooth courses were laid out and established and wheels were built on lighter and better plans. Indeed the improvements in the make of wheels has been the greatest of all factors in speed producing producing.

But still, however well selected the material and well made and highly geared the wheel, there must be great and steady force applied in order to attain the great desideratum speed. This motive power, strong and lasting, has been developing for many years, during which a primitive sport has become a business enterprise as recreation. Bacing struggles too crude to claim parentage have changed into digni-lied contests for athletic supremacy under the control of a responsible governing

During this evolution the rate of speed seemed hopelessly behind that of the trotting horse, but in the course of time the trotter was passed, and even the flecter pacer was distanced. The running horse one would think that, having outstripped the great kings of the race tracks, the bicycler would curb his ambition and he content, but not so. As is now well known, Melvin O. Dennis, a youth of Denver, has brought the mile record down to the astounding figures of 1 minute 11 3-5 seconds and is now working hard to lower his own record and in all costs of lower his own record, and in all parts of the country the crack wheelmen are pedal-ing away, bent on the same object. The most audacious and, one may say, intrepid, undertaking ever entered into by sporting enthusiasts is that of the six ex pert wheelmen, who, headed by the famous Dan Cabaine of St. Louis, are making ready for their grand effort to make the fastest mile ever traveled on wheels, and at the same time outrun the Empire State express, the fastest train in the world. This extraordinary contest, which is to This extraordinary contest, which is to take place June 5, is attracting wide atthat place Julie 3, is attracting when at tention. The cyclists will ride a two wheeled machine fashioned for the use of six wheelmen. It is called a sextuplet, and, though it weighs only 137½ pounds, and, though it weights only 137.2 pounds, is built very strongly.

The race is to be over one mile, at a point where the huge flying locomotive may safely crowd on its greatest speed. In order to test the claims of the makers the unabled muscles and sinews of man can carry him more rapidly than the most perfected application of the powers of steam, a five nile track is to be laid at the side of the New York Central railroad, near Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and here the test will be made. It is necessary that the track should be five wiles in length, as the full speed of

SHALL BOYS GO TO COLLEGE?

Some Are Fitted For Life, and Others Are Unfitted by College Training.

Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in his paper to young men in The Ladies' Home Journal, discusses "Shall We Send Our Boy to College?" answering the query with the assertion, "That depends a great deal on the boy." He announces himself to be a thorough believer in the cellege, but her believer. college, but holds that "it might not be college, but holds that "it might not be best for him (our boy) to go to college; it might not be best for the community that he should. College can fit a man for life, and also it can unfit him. There are styles of education that dis-qualify the student for doing what he is competent to do, without qualifying him to do that which he might like to do, but for which he lacks and always will lack the prerequisites. As a general principle, the more a man knows the better, but so long as the present order of things continues a great amount of very ordinary work will require to be done, and ordinary people will do ordinary work better than extraordinary people will and be a great deal mor comfortable while doing it. Hordes of both sexes are entering college for the reason that they do not enjoy doing commonplace things. The result is that commonplace things are left undone, and uncommonplace things fare still worse. Agriculture is the material basis of a nation's strength and prosperity. We could dispense with either lawyers, doctors or ministers better than we could with farmers.
"Probably we should not quarrel so much if there were fewer students of the law, should not be sick so much if there were fewer students of medicine, and should not be so wicked if there were fewer students of theology. All of these could contribute liberally to the ranks of the agriculturalists with advantage to the professions and to the grain and vegetable markets. I am not disparag-ing anybody, neither am I saying that it would not be a good thing, in itself considered, if every one, however ma terial or menial his occupation, could receive all that the finest school or col-lege training could confer, but that is not practicable at present and never will be till people get over thinking that there is a disgrace attaching to the doing of ordinary things."

Old Coaching Days.

The old coaching days, as far as convenience for travel was concerned, were the dawn of the great days of our pres-ent rapid means of communication. The 70 years or so in which mail coaches waxed and flourished and finally died out before the incursion of railways and steam engines have a decided flavor of romance attached to them, and no doubt the coming and going of stagecoaches lent a certain amount of color and interest and life to the country places and towns through which ran the great main coaching roads. The Bath road, the Dover road, the York road were high-ways of communication along which rolled the heavy private coaches and hariots of the country magnates, and the stagecoaches with their steaming horses passed the various stopping places with the regularity of clockwork.

These stagecoaches, with their complement of coachmen and guards, afforded endless subjects of interest and illustration to the artist and the literary men of the day. Imagine Charles Dick without stagecoaches and denuded of all his vivid descriptions of the scenes such as those in the yard of the White Hart inn, High street, Borough, in "Pickwick," or of the mail coach on the Dover road in "A Tale of Two It is difficult for the present Cities." generation to realize the fatigue and the wintry cold of such long journeys, when frozen feet were enveloped in little straw, and a "shawl" folded round the neck was thought to be a fit protection against the keen night air, a strong contrast to the Inxurious cushioned carriages, hot water tins and fur lined rugs and greatcoats of the present day. - London Spectator.

A Boy's Composition on "Hens,"

"Hens is curious animals. They don't have no nose, nor no teeth, nor no ears. They swallow their vittles whole and new it up in their crops inside of them. The outside of hens is generally put in-to pillars and feather dusters. The inside of a hen is sometimes tilled up with marbles and shirt buttons and sich. A hen is very much smaller than a good many other animals, but they will dig up more plants than anything that ain't hen."-London Tit-Bits.

Both at Once.

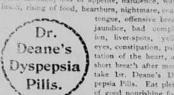

"How do you feel, Bill?" asked the sympathizing friend.

"Some better," answered the wound-ed cowboy. "I guess it won't be long fore I kin get round an get square"— Cincinnati Enquirer.
